Mrs. Sidney MacDowell Died Wednesday After Long Illness

Beloved woman passes to reward after long and peaceful life—Leaves large family to mourn.

This community was saddened late Wednesday afternoon when news of the death of Mrs. Sidney MacDowell, 79, quickly passed through the village. She died as she had lived, peacefully and unafraid.

Mrs. MacDowell had been ill for the past three months and for the past two weeks had been kept alive only through the use of artificial means, oxygen. Death was caused by complications.

She was born Mabel Brundage, January 7, 1861 in Bath, N. Y., a daughter of the late John and Lucy Brundage. She attended school in Bath and lived there until her marriage to Sidney MacDowell June 30, 1885. They were united in marriage in the village of Bath in the Presbyterian Church by the Rev. M. W. Preston.

Throughout her life she took an active interest in the affairs of the Presbyterian Church of which she was a member; she also was an active member of the Missionary Society and Fidelis Class. Mrs. MacDowell was essentially a home maker and the members of her family testify to her ability in this respect, and also the kindly feelings of her neighbors, who appreciated her qualities as a wife, mother and neighbor.

She leaves her husband, Sidney MacDowell, the dean of Main street business men, and five children. They are Brundage MacDowell of Holland, Mich., Matthew MacDowell of Maywood, Ill., Miss Lucy MacDowell of Rochester, Sidney MacDowell of Somersville, N. J., and Jack MacDowell of Vineland, N. J., also a brother, William Brundage of Bath and four grandchildren, Inslie Belle and Jay Sidney MacDowell of Holland, Mich; Matthew Sidney and Mary Lucille MacDowell of Maywood, Ill.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete pending the arrival of all members of the family.

George Mose Suffers Broken Hip and Pelvis

George Mose, Front street, is in the Corning Hospital suffering from a broken hip bone and a broken pelvis bone, sustained in a fall at his home Tuesday. He was taken to the Corning Hospital Wednesday noon for treatment and observation. Mr. Mose lives alone. He was found when a neighbor went to his home to deliver a paper and found him crumpled on the floor and unconscious. Dr. Stuart Bean was called and ordered removal to the hospital. Mr. Mose suffered a stroke two years ago and was severely injured at that time.

Music Concert In AHS April 5—Dance Also

The annual spring concert of the Addison High School music group will be held Friday night, April 5 in the high school auditorium. The sponsoring group will be the Amici Musicae, musical organization of the school for extra-curricular activity.

At this concert each year parents and friends of music hear the best high school music and also see the results of the training given by the music department. Many of the students enter high school with no conception of music or ability to play a musical instrument. Each year new classes enter, the musicians and those interested in music join the orchestra, choir or band to take the place of those graduating. And each year the improvement in the quality of the music played is noted by those interested.

There is a balanced program planned for the concert which will include selections from the classics for the band and orchestra units as well as semi-popular and semi-classical numbers. The vocal unit, a mixed chorus of boys and girls will sing several old favorites as well as some well known choral units.

Something different in programs will be tried this year, according to Director Glenn L. Sprague of the music department. There will be the regular concert for which one admission price will be charged, and then to appeal to those who may desire to dance, there will be an orchestra for dancing after the concert. A reduced price is made for both events. For those who cannot attend the concert but would like to attend the dance, another admission price will be charged.

GUESTS AT WIDGER HOME

George Widger was host Wednesday afternoon and evening to a group of four young people from Hornby. A social time and a picnic supper were enjoyed. The guests were Arthur Bedient, grandson of the host, Betty Rogers, Helen McIntosh and Virgil McIntosh.

ATTEND MEETING IN BATH

Guy Mayer and Chester Arnett attended a meeting of the Steuben County Funeral Directors Association in Bath one evening last week. District Attorney George A. King, guest speaker, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the legal aspects of embalming.

The Rev. Johns—A Boy

The Rev. and Mrs. Mondula C. Johns are the parents of a 7½-pound son born at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, March 27, 1940 in the Corning Hospital. This is their first born child and they have the congratulations of their many parishioners and friends in this community. He has been named David Mondula.

Women Grangers Honor Men Workers Friday

Friday night will be a big night for the men of the Addison Grange. On this night they will see the culmination of several months of work and the highlight of the night will be the supper to be given them by the ladies of the Grange.

The project upon which the men have devoted several hours of work has been the renovation of the Grange quarters in their own building on Main street. A large and unwieldy stage has been removed giving more room to the kitchen and also more space for meetings.

The biggest item of work performed by the men was laying a new maple floor. The old floor of linoleum was worn and the floor beneath it was worn. Now, with the new maple flooring the young and old can dance to their heart's content.

New wall paper has been put on the large room and in the hall, the woodwork all painted and now the place looks like new to the members. The quarters are not alone used by the Grangers but by several farm organizations for meetings of various type. The rooms are an asset to the community and the members of the organization are to be congratulated on the work they have done to beautify the rooms as well as making them more utilitarian.

Mrs. Jennie Mose is chairman of the committee planning a cooked supper for the men who have done the work. There will be a special program of music and entertainment with "Man and Men" as its theme. This will bé given under the direction of Miss Velma Perkins, lecturer.

IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Edgar Thompson entered the Robert Packer Hospital at Sayre, Thursday, for treatment in preparation for an operation.

Legion Auxiliary Seeks Books For Public Library

The appeal for books by the women of the American Legion Auxiliary has borne fruit in several instances. Mrs. Horace E. Auringer, chairman for the committee of the Auxiliary, states that 60 books were contributed last week, the first week after the appeal had been issued through the columns of the Advertiser.

All sorts of books will be welcome to augment the year's buying of books for the library shelves. The library each year purchases books from funds donated, from fines and from income from stocks owned by the library board and also makes some purchases from money received from the village and from the Board of Education. All these put together do not enable the library board to purchase many books. And the income from bonds has vanished this year.

The library will accept gifts of any books, crossword puzzles or any other puzzles or magazines. Children's books are especially desired.

The Legion Auxiliary has long been active in aiding the library and the project for this year is another in a long list of improvements managed by the Auxiliary.

Fractures Kneecaps In Auto Accident

Mrs. Phoebe Chapelle suffered fractures of both kneecaps as well as bruises and shock in a motor accident on the Bath-Avoca highway Monday forenoon. Others in the car were her son, Wendell Chapelle, the driver, his little daughter, Ellen, and Miss Betty Gene Hickey, niece of Mrs. Chapelle. All suffered shock and bruises. The extent of little Ellen's injuries which were confined principally to her face and head had not been definitely determined as this was written. They were all removed to Bath Hospital but returned to their home near Goodhue Lake later in the day. The car was a total wreck. The accident occurred when the rear end of the Chapelle car was rammed by a coal truck.

Rathbone Grange 50th Birthday—Burns Mortgage

The golden anniversary of the Rathbone Grange was observed Friday in the Grange hall there and the occasion was made triply memorable by the burning of the mortgage on the building and also by the return of some of the oldest members of the lodge.

The day was marred by blustery weather which kept many of the members from getting from their homes to main highways in order that they could attend this anniversary.

Women of the Rathbone Grange prepared a dinner which was served to 45 who could get to the dinner. Mrs. Carrie McCaig was toastmistress. She called upon four of the oldest members and former members of that Grange, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Loper and Charles Miller of Addison and Mrs. Mary Hobson of Rathbone. For several years the Addison residents were strong members of the Rathbone Grange and saw it through many stormy days with a pioneering group of other Grange-minded people of the vicinity. Mr. tended the afternoon meetingmawa and Mrs. [illegible]s Hill of Addison also attended the afternoon meeting.

Past County Deputy George Andrus of Woodhull was also called upon for a few remarks relative to Grange activities. The speaker of the day was the Rev. Mr. Beck of the Cameron Methodist Church. He spoke of the significance of the important occasion and of its meaning to those present.

The present structure was purchased three years ago. It was origionally the Borden Methodist church. The building was moved to the site of the Grange-owned lot in Rathbone and the former lodge rooms were built onto the church to make a much larger meeting place and enabled the Grangers to have other facilities in separate rooms.

Charles Bovee Joins Advertiser Staff

Charles Bovee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bovee, Steuben street, has joined the Advertiser mechanical staff and has become the "printer's devil" of the staff. In learning the newspaper makeup from the inside and from the ground, he follows in the footsteps of the brother of one of his ancestors, Horace Greeley, known throughout the world as vitriolic editor of the Tribune, in the days of great personal journalism. Greeley was a brother of a great-great uncle of Charles and sets a shining example for our new member to emulate.

Last month's meeting was canceled on account of snow.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

One of the worst storms of snowbound winter broke over the northern and central parts of the state Monday. Roads previously blocked by snow were rendered impassable when new drifts piled in between old to choke off traffic from several cities. Main routes 20 and 15 were among the many through roads where travel became impossible. Trains were stalled and automobiles deserted by the score while six persons lost their lives as a result of the storm. The storm seemed to begin about ten miles north of the Canisteo-Chemung Valley and extended through Rochester, Watertown and the "North Country" section of the state. There was unseasonable cold weather in this place but no heavy snowfall.

Congressmen with a reelection complex have scanned the income tax returns this month with great satisfaction as belief grows increased revenues may carry the government through without new taxes. Present indications point to receipts exceeding estimates by 300 million. Faced with the probability of levying new taxes or increasing the debt limit past the statutory 45 billion point Congressmen see the possibility of avoiding either of these danger-laden courses until after the national elections.

Easter Parade Frozen Sunday

The Easter parade here developed into an endurance contest between those who wanted to wear their Easter togs and the weather, with the weather finally winning.

The temperature in the early morning hours was 12 above, meaning that new Easter suits and dresses were buried under heavy furs and overcoats. And for those who went to late services in the churches, there was still a cold nip to the air. The sun shone beautifully throughout most of the day and a beautiful sunset marked the day's closing.

However, the usual promenade about the streets by those with new attire was strangely missing in the afternoon and at close of the morning church services.

As usual, there people out to church [illegible]day who are not regular church attendants. Most of the clergymen in the vicinity noted many in their churches who are not regular attendants.

Out-of-School Farm Group Meets Monday, April 8

The out-of-school group of the Young Farmers' Club will meet Monday night, April 8 in the agriculture rooms of the Addison High school to make plans for spring and summer meetings. There will be a series of interesting talks on farm problems confronting vicinity farmers at the present time. In addition there will be an informal program of entertainment and refreshments to be served.

These meetings attract from 20 to 30 young farmers each month, young fellows who have graduated from the agricultural departments of vicinity schools and who desire to keep abreast of changes in farming and farming methods. The course was organized here six years ago by Frank B. Finnerty of the Agricultural Department of Addison High School.

"Jesus' Trial Paradox of Misjustice By World's Perfect Court" Drake Tells Ad Club Audience

County Attorney explains the laws of that time and how they were disregarded in the trial of Christ—Chief Justice wanted Jesus murderd—The legal phases of that world-stirring trial told in detail in most interesting manner.

The court room scene, trial and conviction of Jesus Christ from the view point of a lawyer were outlined for the members of the Advertising Club by County Attorney James Drake in one of the most interesting and dramatic talks given to the members of the club this year. Attorney Drake replaced Attorney Wilbur Knapp who was on a court case and unable to be present.

The opening prayer was offered by the Rev. Russell O. Kirsch. The Rev. John V. Axtell was song leader with Miss Janet Taylor as pianist. Women of the Home Bureau served the dinner in the Baptist Church parlors.

Guests presented were Fay T. Axtell by his father and Walter S. Peake by his uncle, Attorney Charles L. Crane, Ray S. Brown, member of the Cattle Auction committee, gave it as his opinion, based on questions submitted to farmers, that the venture is unwise for Addison. Frank B. Finnerty of the High School Agriculture Department concurred in this opinion stating that over 100 of these auctions had been set up about the state and the State Department held them as being fly-by-night and believes they will not last. Secretary-Treasurer Ralph Dykins gave a financial report of showing $180 in the treasury. Attorney Charles Salerno wanted to know what about dinner plans for the next meeting. He is captain of the winning team in the membership contest. John Davis headed the losing team which must provide the menu next meeting. The program will be in charge of Harry Mullen.

Attorney Drake

Attorney Drake was presented by Walter M. Goff, substituting for Charles Brewster, who is ill at his home.

Mr. Drake said in part: "Easter Sunday you had two thoughts, whether you went to church or not. One was concerned with 'In My Father's house are many mansions' and 'On the third day I shall arise and go to the house of My Father'. You heard the story told in your Easter sermons. I will tell you the story a little differently and throw a little different light on the events of the anniversary of this week.

See The Temple

"Go with me to the Temple in Jerusalem and to the second floor where there are 70 rooms. We pass the doors of those rooms to the main room where sits Caiphas the High Priest. One one side of him sit 23 priests who are familiar with the laws of the church, opposite them are 23 scribes who are familiar with the laws of persons and property and on the side of the room opposite the high priest sit the 23 elders, business men and the backbone of Israel. Think you well that none of these men are butchers, none of them have ever committed a crime and all are legitimate sons of Israel. This is the Great Sanhedrin or highest court of the land. This court was established by Moses. It was strictly a Hebrew court, for Rome gave local government to conquered lands only demanding soldiers and sailors, tribute and the right to review convictions for death.

Legal Procedure

"All persons were arrested on warrants issued by a lesser Sanhedrin of three or seven members. No bail was demanded, the prisoner being kept in jail to await trial. If he could not provide counsel it was given him by the court. All cases were adjourned 30 days to give ample opportunity for gathering of evidence and witnesses. No one was allowed to plead guilty to crime involving death without trial.

"After 30 days came the trial. There was no district attorney. The justice conducted the trial. The defendant's attorney was not allowed to call witnesses unless given power by the justice. Witnesses were not required to take a mumbly-jumbly oath but were told the story of Cain and Abel and were warned that if they lied they too would be outcasts and if caught might be put to death. And all witnesses against a man must take some part in taking his life's blood if he were convicted. If a man was ordered to be stoned to death they must help cast the stones, if hanged they must pull the rope. With these safeguards witnesses were made aware of the importance of the truth. Every precaution was taken to insure the truth and to impress witnesses with its imporance.

"A defendant might take the stand in self defense or swear witnesses. It was felt that the strain of a trial might make a man appear guilty, hence all was done to protect him. When all the evidence was in, one of the judges was appointed by the high priest to sum up the case for the defendant. There was no sleeping on the part of any judge, for he never knew when he would be called upon to sum up. There was no flowery oratory, just a statement of facts. There was no questioning other judges for a judge could be deprived of office and property if he did.

Fair Judges

"The presiding judge then appointed a judge to sum up for the prosecution. And in each case the judge said, 'I hold no ill will against the defendant and have not made up my mind as to his guilt or innocence. Then all the judges voted. No judge could discuss his vote, tell another how he voted or influence another judge. The penalty was loss of office and property. A clerk picked up the votes and the decision was given. If more voted innocent, the defendant was discharged. If found guilty he was given a second trial. Judges defending the defendant voted for acquittal.

"The judges went each to his own room. Court was adjourned for 24 hours. They slept and ate there and did not confer with the other judges nor were they influenced by strong characters in the judiciary.

Second Trial if Guilty

In the second trial, the same rules of law prevailed as in the first trial. Except another judge summed up for the defendant and another for the prosecution. Then came the final ballot. If found innocent the defendant was discharged. If found guilty he was taken before the Roman judiciary, who prided themselves on their fairness and justice.

Strange Law

"By a strange law, if the conviction was unanimous the defendant was discharged. The story was that if the judges could not find a single flaw in the prosecution there was something wrong. Moses called this a perfect court.

John's Coming

"Now to the events of this anniversary week. John gave notice of the coming of the Messiah. Thousands followed John expecting to find a deliverer, one who would deliver them from the Romans. We wonder what John meant when he said, 'Woe unto you moneylenders, scandalmongers and the like' without mentioning the poor, the beggars and the sick. With that admonition from John, Jesus was started under a handicap and placed in a position where the people doubted his mission.

Jesus Ignores Laws

The Jewish law provided that a man must go to school to read the Bible in public, he must spend 40 days in the wilderness and have a certificate to preach even as lawyers, doctors and teachers have certificates to practice today. Jesus had none of these.

Jesus—a Magician

"Magicians of that time were medical men, men who cured. They were men of science. In Jericho there was a clinic where men were cured of leprosy, cured of blindness and where they cured men's hearing. But it cost too much. Jesus cured without cost. But not as a miracle man, for he was a magician to those about him. He did not go out of bounds until the last three months of his ministry, for in healing, he admonished 'go and tell no one'. His miracles were done before small groups, He did not want people to know He was the Messiah until His time came. And this fact disappointed his followers.

"Jews did not eat before washing, Jesus did. Jews did not heal the sick on Sunday. Jesus did. He violated many of the laws of the Hebrews and most of his life had more enemies than friends.

Friday, March 30, 31 A. D.

"Friday, March 31, 32 A. D. This man proved he was not a magician but the Messiah. In Bethany he cured a man who was born blind. The doctors had not done that. He raised Lazarus from the dead after four days.

"Caiphas in the high court heard

BEST POTATOES WANTED

Are local farmers passing up a good bet by clinging to old fashioned methods of marketing spuds? The other day a prominent Corning man asked the writer why it was potatoes are shipped into Steuben in bags graded and packed in Maine. "Why don't our farmers grade and bag their potatoes so we can buy them", he asked. "If we purchase graded potatoes sacked by the growers we have to get them from Maine, and here we live in one of the biggest potato-growing counties in the country".

This man's thoughts have doubtless been echoed by many others. Here we have a county boasting production of thousands of bushels of potatoes every year—potatoes which for the most part must be marketed. We have a county with a population of about 85 thousand persons, most of whom consume potatoes. Yet, many of the potatoes eaten in Steuben County are grown in Maine, Long Island or in far away Idaho. "Carrying coals to Newcastle" was a sensible performance compared to bringing Idaho potatoes into Steuben County IF everything were equal. However, that big IF is where the rub comes in.

Farmers in Maine, Long Island and Idaho seem to be several jumps ahead of Steuben County farmers in marketing their potatoes. They grade, pack and ship potatoes into Steuben which are plainly marked with the grower's name and address and the product is accepted by thousands of housewives in Steuben because the potatoes are uniformly good. These potatoes cost more—no one can ship carefully graded spuds hundreds of miles without great expense—but the many housewives feel they are worth more, so they buy them. One of the principal reasons they buy them is because too frequently they have purchased potatoes of inferior quality in bulk from their grocer.

For example during the course of the current winter many housewives have been heard grumbling about the poor quality of potatoes they have gotten from their grocer. Complaints have been heard that many of these potatoes were "hardly fit to feed to pigs". Placing such inferior quality spuds out among the consumers is a reflection both on the grocer and the grower who brought them to market. After the consumer has used up a few pecks of these inferior spuds it is not surprising she turns to trying a graded article packed and guaranteed by the grower.

It is certain that with all the thousands of potatoes grown in Steuben there must be some spuds of excellent quality. But many consumers will vow they have not seen one this year. It is time Steuben farmers awoke to the fact local people demand quality here, just as they do in other places. Let the Farm Bureau superintend the grading and packing of bagged potatoes so we can buy quality spuds grown in our own county and marketed with the grower's name. Certainly they will cost more than the bulk goods—but the housewife who has pared away half a pan of sunburned, mutilated tubers will declare the best are cheapest in the long run. Certainly home-grown graded potatoes should sell for less than the same quality shipped from Maine.

When Steuben farmers wake up to the fact they are losing the home market and take measures to regain the same, there will be less foreign grown spuds eaten in our county. Unless they do so there will be more and more graded, bagged potatoes consumed here, for folks are getting sick of bringing home from the grocery a lot of bulk potatoes nondescript in origin and miserable quality. Most housewives want the best in potatoes just as they want the best in milk and the best in eggs. The farmers who cater to this "best" market will get along "best" in the end.

WINTER FRIENDS

For the past six weeks no one in this community has been heard to sigh for an "old fashioned winter". It has come with all the variations known to the oldest settler this season—cold—snow—wind-piled drifts which block roads and send the denizens of the woods out of the usual haunts to seek food nearer the habitations of men.

It is strange how the presence of danger from starvation can make wild creatures less fearful of man during a severe winter. Deer wander out of the woods in herds to crop a few mouthsful of feed off a wind-swept hillside and birds seek feed near houses they steer far from in normal times. Local people who have taken pity on their feathered friends and established feeding stations have been rewarded with many pretty sights this winter. It is surprising how soon these timid creatures seem to realize that man can be friendly and not to be feared. Several varieties of woodpeckers, nuthatches and chick-a-dees have enjoyed suet near the writer's window while the seed-eating birds have eagerly begged for breakfast every morning it was late in going out. Even the bluejay, paradox of beautiful plumage and raucous voice, has flown to the porch after food.

This tendency to lose fear for men in great super-natural danger has been remarked by woodsmen caught in forest fires. Wild animals of the most timid sorts have sought a measure of safety in a waterhole with a man when fire was sweeping overhead. Presence of greater danger may make man seem less dangerous to animals, yet man can create real confidence in wild creatures by treating them with kindness. How quickly squirrels will learn to take nuts of human hands, once the small animals find men can furnish food as well as be a source of danger.

Cold winters like the one we hope to have seen practically the last of, are hard on wild creatures as well as those who walk on two legs. But they do give an opportunity to show kindness to the more unfortunate dumb creatures, and in studying these creatures we widen our own horizon. The snow will soon be all gone and the cold forgotten in the heat of next summer. But the little birds will not forget where they found food during the winter's famine and they will be back again next winter looking for the human friends who were friends indeed.

FREE ENTERPRISE

America is undoubtedly at the cross-roads of national life, and Americans must soon choose whether to cling to old traditions which have built this country into the most virulent, progressive nation in the world, or to tie our hopes for the future in the lately advanced theory of the government thinking for all. America has from the first been a nation which expanded with the expanding fortunes of its citizens. It has become strong because poor, unheralded boys have been able to start life with the knowledge their future could be as bright as their ambition and thrift made it.

Some tell us the day has passed in which America can continue to give unlimited opportunities to our boys and girls. They tells us the multiplication of machines has killed opportunity for our youth and that our only hope for the future lies in placing industry more and more under control of the government so that state regulation can divide and re-divide the work to be done.

This theory, coupled with the growing tendency to tax wealth and large incomes to death, strikes directly at the American system which has always provided great opportunities for the poor boy to rise. We cannot exist half under the theory of free enterprise and half under the theory of federal domination of business any more than we could exist half slave and half free. We must soon decide whether it has been right or wrong for men to manufacture and sell at a profit which sometimes enabled one of hum[illegible]gin to amass a fortune counted in mil[illegible]

It is true that holders of g[illegible] wealth sometimes abuse the power which mo[illegible]nquestionably can buy. Monopolies sometim[illegible] work injustices and stifle competition, but often great fortunes have been in the hands of benevolent minded Americans who gave their money wisely for causes and institutions that are humanitarian and educational. Andrew Carnegie was one prince of wealth who believed it would be dishonorable to die a rich man, so he gave his fortune away to found libraries. Rosenwald, former Sears Roebuck executive dispersed his fortune while he lived to better the condition of illiterate children in the deep south. John D. Rockefeller gave away millions to his health foundations and other great charities, while George Eastman gave away most of the huge fortune he accumulated through the Kodak Company, one of his favorite benevolences being the foundation of dental clinics to help the poor.

Just a few weeks ago there died a man who typified this quality of benevolent spending of wealth. The late Edward S. Harkness soon after finishing college devoted his life chiefly to giving away his multi-million fortune intelligently. No outsider knows exactly the extent of this man's giving to education and medical research, but specific gifts are known to total more than $100,000,000.

One could go on endlessly naming wealthy men and women who have considered their fortunes to be great trusts placed in their hands to be expended largely for human good. There are, of course, scores of other wealthy persons who inherit fortunes which are thrown out in splurges of reckless spending and notoriety. Unfortunately the latter are the ones who get most of the publicity. But the fact these idle rich do figure so prominently in the press is no argument to support the theory of stifling free enterprise.

To make a large fortune in any form of industry it is necesary to create a huge amount of wealth that goes for jobs, and jobs make opportunities for men to rise above their surroundings.

Shall our system of free enterprise be allowed to continue, or will the American people throw out our manner of life for some communistic theories which would make it impossible for any boy to work his way to the top of the ladder through industry and thrift coupled with a grain of common sense? The decision of this vital question must be made eventually by the great majority of citizens who have always been able to have the final say in America. If they know all the facts we could not conceive how Americans would ever reject our way of living for theoretical advantages. But we must weigh the facts and compare the advantages enjoyed by the average American with the advantages which could be attained in any other land.

The free system of enterprise should need no stronger defender than ourselves, once we have honestly sought the facts.

The Rambler

With so many people in the churches Sunday, I know some of the clergymen must have been tempted to wish some of their parishioners a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year, for they will not see many of these parishioners again until next Easter.

—o—

And speaking of churches again, I have heard from time to time in the past years of people leaving this or that church because they did not like the clergyman and his doings. To me, their religion is not deep-rooted but depends upon external too much. I'm reminded of what a prominent Baptist clergyman said here one time, "When the flag goes by you doff your hat whether you like the man carrying it or not, and the same should hold for religion". It is the religion and not the man preaching it which should count

In spite of the extreme cold weather Easter Sunday I noticed that some of the young girls insisted on wearing their new hats and their Easter clothes and overcoats.

Leave it to the ingenuity of kids. Monday the wind was quite cold and strong. A bunch of youngsters took advantage of that wind to erect home-made sails on their sleds and slide several hundred feet on the ice on Farnham's flats between Steuben street and the river.

Walter Pitken has written a book "The Secret of Achievement" in which he gives eight suggestions for achievement which I believe are good. They are: Urge to do something, persistence, thinking positive thoughts and having confidence in self, develop hunger and thirst for self improvement, expend unusual energy in your work, have driving enthusiasm, have intellectual curiosity and finally have creative imagination or the ability to think things through.

A man I envy—Ben Lacke, 68, saw one movie in his life and was disappointed. With most of the pictures shown during the past few years there has been not much to offer in the way of amusement or entertainment. And when something like "Gone With the Wind", "Pinocchio" or "Seven Dwarfs" does come along the public goes for it in a big way. The sad plight of the movies can best be emphasized by the way in which they have hundreds of counter attractions such as double features, bingo nights, grocery nights, amateur nights to lure the crowd. If movies stood on their own, all these things would not be necessary.

As this is being written the Little Rambler is celebrating his second birthday. During that time the Rambler household has taken an entirely new slant on life, and I must say much for the better. And now instead of seeing just "kids" playing in the street, we see individual children, with individual habits, ideas, personalities and ways of life. It is a most interesting transition from our former way of thinking when we liked children but did not see their individualities.

How Much For [illegible]oy?

What is a twelve-ye[illegible]d boy worth? Well, if he is you[illegible] boy or my boy no amount of money could ever compensate for his loss; but entirely aside from our own sentimental interest in our children is the value placed upon a child by the courts, which invariably runs into large sums, while the value the United States Government places on him when he has developed into a reliable citizen runs into thousands of dollars.

Suppose he doesn't become a reliable citizen of the self supporting variety, but on the contrary develops into a charge upon society? Well of course in that case not only is his estimated value lost to the nation, but in addition he becomes an expense to society, and you and I have to help support him, no matter whose boy he is.

However, experience has definitely proven that when a boy receives training in self reliance, initiative, leadership and public service, he becomes at an early age a citizen who can be relied upon to act intelligently in times of stress or disaster. A boy who has become an asset to society increasing his value to several times that of an untrained lad and to many times that of an untrained dependent.

Soon, every responsible citizen of your community will be given an opportunity to support the Boy Scout movement, so that each 12-year-old lad in your community can start his training as a useful addition to your community service where he will be given a very practical course in self reliance, initiative and good citizenship. The grandest investment you have ever been offered, of benefit to you, to the boy, to your community and to your nation.

Have you a shadow of doubt in your mind as to the value of such an investment? If you have, ask your congressman, banker, minister, your lawyer, doctor or a court judge as well as the editor of this paper. The bigger they are the better they know the value of good citizens and how to produce them.

It costs so little and means so much to invest in a boy.

Science Convicts Drunken Drivers in Proposed Law

Drunken drivers arrested in this locality no longer will be able to escape punishment on technical or legalistic grounds, if a bill introduced in the legislature by State Senator Thomas C. Desmond, of Orange County, is adopted. Scientists, he said, have at last enabled lawmakers to establish a definite basis for proving or disproving that drivers are intoxicated.

The bill defines drunkenness in clear-cut terms. Any driver having over fifteen hundredths per cent of alcohol in his blood stream will be deemed legally unfit to drive. The amount of alcohol can be determined by a new medical device which is operated simply, quickly and inexpensively at the scene of any local accident.

"This bill will make our laws against drunken driving practicable" Senator Desmond stated. Lack of scientific and legal definition of drunkenness has heretofore impeded proper enforcement of our laws. Yet the most serious of the 75,000 automobile accidents which occur annually in New York State are those involving drunken drivers. Based on the most up-to-date scientific research, our bill will give enforcement officers an effective dread menace of the drunken driver".

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Evaporated Milk

Mrs. R. W. R., writes: "Because of circumstances over which I have no control, I have been obliged to give my family evaporated milk to drink. Am I depriving the children of the proper vitamins? Their ages are 12, 13 and 19."

Professor Helen Monsch of the College of Home Economics replies: "Although we do not know the whole story, research so far shows not enough difference between evaporated and fresh milk to worry about using it for children of school age.

"Evaporated milk compares favorably with fresh cow's milk in everything except vitamin C. Since milk is not usually taken for vitamin C, and if your children get it from fruits and vegetables, especially tomatoes, oranges, grapefruit and lemons, you need not worry about using evaporated milk.

Rabbit Strips Bushes

Mrs. K. K. M., writes: A rabbit has eaten the bark from some rose bushes which formed an arbor in my yard. He has pretty well stripped them for a distance of twelve inches, commencing at about one foot above the ground. Can anything be done to keep the bushes alive?"

Kenneth Wheeler of the floriculture department answers: "Unless rabbit injury occurs again, there is not much danger of losing your roses. About the only thing to do is to cut off the canes just below where the rabbit has eaten. This will allow new buds to break and shoots to develop.

"The plants, however, will not bloom this year, but will continue in the future. More information has been sent you about injuries of mice and rabbits."

Around Our House

Directors of the club will be elected after the banquet Thursday night and they in turn will meet to elect officers to take the place of those retiring including: Vice president, Leroy Chowning; secretary-treasurer ,A. W. Decker, Jr.

When Johnnie Misbehaves

Even the best of children sometimes misbehave and need some discipline. Before punishing a child the parent should ask, "Will the punishment I use help him to know how to do better next time?"

Punishment, if necessary, should never have revenge as a motive and should not be used as an outlet for the parents' own emotions. It should be constructive and help the child to better behavior, says the New York State College of Home Economics. The goal should always be: use this experience to help the child learn something worthy. A youngster should constantly grow from dependence on his parents toward independence and self-direction.

Necessary punishment should be the natural result of the misdeed and should follow it soon. For instance, if children quarrel, a natural consequence might be to keep them apart for awhile; or if a child, just out of curiosity, spills a pan of water on the floor, he naturally should help to wipe the floor. He thus learns the results of his actions.

Parents sometimes fail to help their child do things correctly because they are inconsistent. At one time they laugh at him and call him cute; at another time they punish him severely for the same behavior; and still again they may fail to notice the child at all because they are busy, tired, or are in a different humor.

If the parent understands and uses good guidance, little punishment should be necessary.

WASHINGTON NEWS

Designed to reduce unemployment by giving employers a reward in the form of a tax reduction or even a wage subsidy for increasing the number of their employees, a proposal has been introduced in the Senate which advocates the increased use of man power and seeks to bring into more equal balance the use of machines to that of men in the production of the country's goods. There can be no question that the machines have misplaced many employees in certain industries. There can also be no question that machines have in many instances contributed much to employment. One argument advanced in favor of the proposal is "that to produce an equal amount of goods, 3,000,000 less workers are employed today than were employed in 1927". On the other side, it is contended that the bill would put a tax upon human progress and act as a preventive of all technological inventions that would improve anything now in existence.

In the past we have heard much about the gradual shift of population from rural to urban areas. The shift has been rather small, however, for in 1910 our farm population was given as 32,077,000 persons. The figure for 1938 is 31,819,000. In 1910 there were 6,362,000 farms, in 1935, 6,812,0000.

To many of our citizens, March 15th marked the dead line for the performance of the sometimes painful duty of paying an income tax to the Federal govarnment. We can console ourselves some, however, for if we lived in England and earned $2000 a year we would pay an income tax of $171.25. If we earned $4000 we would pay $796.25; $6000 the tax would be $1,421.25 and if we were so fortunate as to earn $8000 we would pay $2,171.25. Yes, it could be worse even though we do pay a tremendous hidden tax on all the necessities of life, in addition to our income tax.

About 27 thousand people are receiving the talking books which are issued under the auspices of the Library of Congress. These cost the taxpayers about $70,000 a year, but are so popular among the blind people that the service is going to be continued. About 21 thousand machines have been sent out over the country on which the books, or in reality, phonograph records, are used and which books contain the words to which the blind people can listen. Any blind person can secure these talking books by application to the various library centers.

Recent recommendations of the Special Committee headed by Representative Howard W. Smith of Virginia that the present labor relations act be amended, has smoked out administration leaders in the House, with the result that the House Labor Committee now proposes some amendments to the act. In the past this committee has strenuously resisted all efforts to amend the law in any particular. This move on the part of the Labor Committee appears to be for the purpose of forestalling the more sweeping changes advocated by the Smith Committee, and also to eliminate the Labor Relations Act being made an issue in the coming Presidential campaign.

ASK The Scientist

Science can be of service to the home, so the Science Board of Syracuse University's Radio Workshop offers answers here this week to questions of interest to the housewife along with other replies concerning tornadoes, cyclones and germ-filled bombs.

If you have a question to ask the scientists, send it to the New York Press Association, The Castle, Syracuse, N. Y., The Board will answer each week those questions considered most interesting and timely.

QUESTION. I have just made some new cases for my silver. What should I treat these cases with to prevent tarnishing of the silver?

ANSWER. If silver is placed in flannel cloth and put in a tight case with some pieces of solid camphor gum, tarnishing of the silver will be diminished greatly.—Dr. Albert L. Elder, chemist.

QUESTION. How can yellow surface discoloration of piano keys be prevented?

ANSWER. The piano should be left in sunlight of you desire to prevent discoloration of the ivory on the piano keys. If direct sunlight strikes the keys, they are less likely to discolor. Keys which already have a yellow discoloration should be scraped and polished by a man trained in such work.—Dr. Elder.

QUESTION. What is a good solution to remove stains from teacups?

ANSWER. Some housewives use lemon juice to remove these stains while others prefer vinegar. Borax, washing soda, and other mild cleansers are used for this purpose also. —Dr. Elder.

QUESTION. What is the difference between tornadoes and cyclones?

Answer. Both cyclones and tornadoes belong to the same class of air movements, that is, in this northern hemisphere of ours, they are both inward, upward, and counter-clockwise eddies of air. The chief difference between them is in their size and velocity and, therefore, in their destructiveness.

A cyclone of which we have 25 or 30 every year, is a mass of air some 1,500 miles or more in diameter, moving never more than 60 miles an hour and usually less. Heavy snow which hit central New York in mid-February was brought here by a cyclone.

A tornado is a very violent moving mass traveling up to 300 or 400 miles per hour. It is usually only a few hundred yards in diameter. Tornadoes occur usually in flat areas such as our Mississippi valley or similar areas in Russia. The tornado which struck some weeks ago in Georgia seems to have been off the usual path of tornadoes.—Dr. Sidman Poole, geographer.

QUESTION. A newspaper report says Russia plans to fill airplane bombs with disease germs. Is it scientifically possible to spread disease in this way?

ANSWER. The answer to this question involves what is known of the care which must be taken to preserve bacteria or germs. Bacteria can be kept alive only in a proper medium. The bomb, therefore, must provide conditions in which the germs can be preserved. When the germs were dispersed from the bomb, they would still require this proper medium for their continued life.

Even for the purpose of polluting streams which serve as a water supply, the use of germ-laden bombs dropped from airplanes seems highly fanciful. In the case of the streams, the running water would purify itself in a very short time even if the bacteria were introduced into it by germ-bombs.—Dr. Ernest Reed, geneticist.

QUESTION. Does milk which has been heated, cooled and then heated and cooled again spoil sooner than that which has been heated and cooled but once?

Answer. Proper answer to this question depends upon what is meant by "heated". If warming the milk as would be done in preparing it for feeding an infant is meant, then the answer is emphatically yes. Such milk will spoil more quickly than that which has been kept cool. It spoils more quickly simply because bacteria which ordinarily bring about the spoilage of milk grow much more rapidly in the higher temperature.

If milk is heated to a higher temperature upward of 140 degrees Fahrenheit and promptly cooled and kept cool, it will not spoil as quickly as milk which has not been subjected to such heat. Practical advice in this matter is that milk should be used as promptly as possible and should not be preserved by repeated heatings. The state department of health forbids this since there is a state law expressly forbidding re-pastuerization of milk.

The reason for this advice against re heating of milk which has once been treated at high temperature is that the changes which may eventually occur in such milk are likely to be much more objectionable than changes which would have been brought about had the milk not been heated.

High temperature kills a greater proportion of the bacteria which brings about the normal souring of milk and permits survival of a larger percentage of those organisms which cause putrefaction. Products of putrefaction are much more objectional and even more dangerous than the products of acid fermentation.—Dr. Henry N. Jones, bacteriologist.

Dish For This Week

Eggs Baked in Tomatoes

A colorful way to fix eggs to combine foods high in nourishment and low in cost is to bake them in tomatoes. The following recipe, which requires little time and effort to prepare, is suggested by the New York State College of Home Economics:

4 eggs
2 cups of tomatoes
1 tablespoon of diced onion
1 cup of toasted bread crumbs
2 tablespoons of butter
1 teaspoon of sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
Pepper to taste

Season the tomatoes, mix in the onion and place the mixture in a casserole. Press the toasted bread crumbs into the tomatoes, break the eggs unbeaten into the tomatoes, dot with butter and cover the container. Put in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit, cook until the eggs are set, from 25 to 30 minutes, and remove the cover during the last five minutes. (Eggs are generally cooked at a lower temperature, but the tomatoes keep them from getting too hot.)

A suggested luncheon menu is: eggs baked in tomatoes, baked stuffed potatoes, raw spinach salad, whole wheat bread and butter, baked cinnamon apples, milk for the children, and coffee, tea or milk for the grown-ups.

Bowling is still the great indoor game for this weather and seems to be the only active sport at the present time with baseball, track and other spring activities held up, and basketball, hockey and other indoor schedules having run out.

Freak Accident Monday Sends Two to Hospital

John W. Steiner, Harrisburg, is lying in Corning Hospital seriously wounded as the result of a peculiar mishap on the Painted Post-Coopers Road Monday. Steiner was driving a truck load of potatoes towards the Post when an Ontario Biscuit truck driven by J. D. Childs Buffalo, approached. A sudden gust of wind forced the smaller vehicle to lurch head on into the larger Buffalo truck.

Steiner has a fractured skull, fractured left leg, and is suffering from shock. The driver of the truck is bruised and has several body injuries but was released from Corning Hospital Tuesday.

New Ideas For Your Home

Something rather "different" in the way of books on decorating has just come off the presses of M. Barrows & Co., New York. Eminently practical, the volume concerns itself mainly with things which you yourself can make for your home, and contains 142 working illustrations by the author showing all important steps, as well as the finished product, in the making of draperies, lampshades, slipcovers, rugs, and the hundred and one other things the interested homemaker would like to make for her own rooms.

Use of Glass Grows In Kitchen, Bath

The use of glass in interior decoration is growing in popularity, particularly in kitchens and bathrooms. Plate glass is now made in many tints, including ivory, gray, jade, black, white and burgundy, and it blends well with most building materials.

Even after many years of service plate glass retains its bright clear surface. In many kitchens it is chosen for work counters as well as walls, as it is readily kept clean and does not absorb odors or moisture.

When the 20-month-old child entered Rochester Hospital suffering with this disease Dr. Dietel of Churchville received the parents' consent to try a new drug, a relative of the chemical sulphanilamide. Child's temperature mounted from 105 to 106 and then started dropping. Tests showed every trace of the germ has disappeared and the child will leave the hospital in a few days.

Government consent has been given to American airplane manufacturers to release to allied purchasers hundreds of ships intended for our government. Although these included some of latest, fastest ships no secret plane attachments will go with the machines. Enormous increase in the capacity of American plants convinced government officials that we could safely wait for new U. S. planes until foreign orders are filled. Cost of planes for the U. A lull has come in the Nazi war on British shipping and the Allies are wondering if this portends the outbreak of a new, more vicious attack by Hitler in an unexpected quarter. Principal war activity the past week has been the sinking of German vessels, several having been sent to the bottom by British subs and surface vessels near neutral coasts as they tried to run the blockade. Nearly all Nazi sub victims of late have been neutrals. Meanwhile a calm in the air follows the Nazi-British exchange of bombing compliments of last week. One British plane has been reported lost in reconnaisance flight, but no large scale aerial war has been tried by either side.

CHAPTER CHATTER

Farm Management

Father and son arrangements should be made when the son is planning to stay on the farm. But first, the son should decide whether to stay on the farm, whether to go on to some other farm or get some other job. If the son does decide to stay on the farm, there are five things which should be present.

One provides that there should be a good business opportunity there. Two: There should be room for the son in the business. Three: Satisfactory living conditions: Four: The father and son should get along good together. Five: There should be a businesslike arrangement. (This is most important although others should exist). The five conditions can be changed somewhat to meet conditions at home.

The last condition has a number of ways to be worked. The first is for the son to ask the father when money is needed; two, the son to be paid wages; three, the son to be paid wages and have an outside enterprise such as raising chickens; fourth, for the father and son to share in the profits and expenses and also share in the rent.

In some cases the shares are not the same for it may be agreed that one does more work than the other. In the last way of management there is the sharing of responsibility as well as the expenses. This can be shared equally or the father may take the full responsibility and then advise the son.

When the son goes on the farm, especially if he has brothers and sisters, some agreement should be made at that time. The son will probably have practically full charge of the farm when the father is 60 or 65. At this time if the son does not take over the farm it will begin to get run down and by the time of the father's death will be practically worthless. But if the son does take it over, the farm will be kept in its top condition. When the father dies the farm will be worth a great deal more, but the other brothers and sisters will come in and claim their share. This way the son on the farm will have kept the farm up and in the end will not get any more than those who did not stay at home. This is why some agreement or arrangement should be made so that the one who stays at home will get what is really coming to him instead of just his share at the time of the father's death.

Pasture Improvement

Most pastures of New York are very poor in phosphorus. In applying phosphorus enough it should be applied to make a good growth of wild white clover. The application recommended is from 600 to 800 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate. This should be repeated at intervals of from four to five years.

New York State pastures are also very poor in nitrogen. This can be added through fertilizer, but the cheapest way to get it is through wild white clovers or other nitrogeneous plants.

If pasture has a little wild white clover it would not be necessary to plant more. One plant under good conditions will grow one square yard of white clover. If it doesn't have any wild white clover it can be added by sowing just one pound to the acre which will leave 16 seeds per square inch. So you cannot possibly go wrong if one plant will seed.

It is also advisable for most good farmers now without the new improved pasture system, to have milley if their land is wet or sudan grass where the land is dry for pasture for the cows during July and August.

This new pasture grass can be used for feed during the drought months by cutting the pasture during May and putting in the silo with molasses and phosphoric acid and feed will be staple during the dry months.

New Pasture Grass

New York wild birdfoot-trefoil or Lotus Corniculatus is a new pasture grass which seems to withstand the mid-summer drought better than any grass established Yet it has a root system that extends a number of times the depth of all other grasses. It grows fast and is high in feeding value It grows thick and mass-like on the ground giving the cows an equal chance to get the 150 pounds of range she has to have in about eight hours of actual feeding and in order for the cows to do this adequately she has to have grass like this which can furnish plenty of feed during July and August. This also lasts year after year if the ground is kept fertilized well on the outer surface of the ground.

these things and on that Friday night before Holy Week, met with five justices to talk about these stories. They sent messengers to determine if they were true and the messengers reported they were. Caiphas wanted a hireling to murder Jesus, for he felt that this man could kill off all people and live Himself. He was afraid this man would head an uprising and overthrow the government. The Scribes advised against this and their wisdom prevailed. They thought to convict Jesus of blasphemy. They decided to ask questions of Jesus Saturday when he came to the temple, but Saturday Jesus did not come. Sunday Jesus came and cleared out the money changers and such was the throng that the Scribes could not question Jesus.

Trap Set

"Monday they would ask questions which would convict Him but Jesus did not come. Then Monday night 14 judges met and again Caiphas wanted Jesus murdered. The Sadducees, whom up to this time had not been in favor of action, wanted action because they heard Jesus preached life after death. Tuesday the Scribes decided to dress as poor people that Jesus would not know them. It was then they asked the question which led to the answer 'give to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's.,

"Having failed they met again Tuesday night with a majority of the court present. This in spite of the fac tthe Jewis law forbid the court to meet at night. Caiphas then said 'we will get Jesus in here and we will convict him' So a warrant on a charge of blasphemy was given the Roman soldiers, but Wednesday they could not find Jesus nor did they know where he was. Then Caiphas, high justice of this high court, offered a reward for Jesus.

"Jesus came into the city Thursday night only for the last supper and again returned to the hills. It was then Judas made up his mind to deliver Jesus for the $15 or 30 pieces of silver. At midnight the Roman soldiers found Jesus and arrested him. Only Judas and Peter of the disciples followed.

"The Romans took Him to the home of Annas, a former justice where Roman soldiers struck Jesus when he refused to talk. This likewise was against the law for no man could be touched or struck to secure a confession.

Law Violated

"The only crime which legally could be charged against Jesus was malicious mischief and this was not punishable by death. There were no ballots this time, all judges voted 'guilty' by acclamation against the law, there was no adjournment for 24 hours while the judges meditated alone. There was no testimony for Him. Adjournment was for one hour and the judges watched the Roman soldiers disobeying and maltreating Him in the courtyard.

Mob Rule Prevails

"Jesus was mute in his own defense. Caiphas asked Him if He were King of the Jews' and Jesus replied 'Thou has said it, not I'. Caiphas then stood, tore his garments and accused Jesus of blasphemy. All judges again voted 'guilty' and the verdict was unanimous and under the Hebrew law Jesus should have been discharged. He was ordered to be taken before Pilate the Roman judge and that is another story of justice.

Greatest Justice Miscarriage

"To continue our story. Judas returned. He did not know that Jesus was not to be king of a material world. He threw the money into the chambers of the judges and it rolled at their feet. They did not know what to do with the traitor's money for there was nothing in the law about this. Judas then committed suicide and the judges felt relieved for now the law provided the money could go for a pauper's grave.

"The greatest court in the world at that time committed the greatest miscarriage of Justice. They worried over $15 and were so careless with a human life.

"The lessons gleaned from this from a lawyer's standpoint is: I don't care what color robes you wear, I don't care what the rules and procedures are if a man of character is not there to enforce these, you haven't got much."

National Dairy Leader Urges Production Records

Continuous production records are essential in the development of a profitable dairy herd, was the statement made by H. W. Norton, Jr., Secretary of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, at the 7th Annual Steuben Dairy Banquet last Thursday.

In spite of snow blocked roads, two hundred twenty-five dairymen attended the event which honored the Holstein breed, and which paid tribute to the dairy industry.

Holsteins Abundant Producers

'The development of high producing herds is a job that extends beyond the span of an ordinary life time,' Mr. Norton said, who claimed that the great herds of the Netherlands, the birthplace of the Holstein breed, was the result of centuries of constructive breeding.

Mr. Norton stated that the Holstein-Friesian Association of America has long recommended as a breed policy the testing of the entire herd rather than the selected individuals, and has advocated life time production instead of periodic testing. This type of program is responsible, he stated for the great production capacity of the Holstein cow, as indicated by the fact that the average of more than 42,000 yearly records of Holstein-Friesian cows and heifers of all ages is 16,752 pounds milk and 573 pounds fat, approximately three and a half times the average of the dairy cows of the United States.

Tribute Paid Members

Cooperative bull associations were cited as the dairy 'Event of the Year' in a tribute paid to the members of Steuben's six associations by Leland Lamb, representative of The American Dairy Cattle Club. Tribute was also paid by Mr. Lamb to the charter members of the 3000 lb. club, viz: I. J. Calkins, Avoca; Wilson Bennett, Painted Post; Edward Heinaman, Bath; C. A. Stewart & Son, Addison; Clem Drake & Sons, Woodhull; Herbert Deming, Savona; Ketch Bros., Cohocton.

Gerald Kent of Troupsburg was chairman of the meeting, and the farm bureau the sponsor.

Wilbor Hannahs, student at Cornell University, was recently honored by election to the treasurership of the Westminister group at the Presbyterian Church, Ithaca.

Southern Tier Escapes Storm

While Central New York was being buried in a snow storm accompanied by 40 mile winds early this week, this vicinity was having unusual March weather in sub-freezing temperatures and high winds. But unlike Central New York, where Rome, Utica and other cities were snow bound the Southern Tier was only snow bound in places which have been snowbound for several weeks. Several deaths and accidents were reported in other parts of the state from storms.

Easter Sunday was sunshiny with a temperature of about 12 to 15 degrees here with some wind. Central, Northern and Western New York had high winds and snow, marooning several cities and many travelers. State police forbid traveling on the highways in many places except under dire need both Sunday and Monday.

In the southern tier Monay's weather was cold with a cold west wind but snow was packed in the vicinity so that there was little flying snow to block highways as in other parts of the state.

The weather continued cold, with a thermometer reading at about 15 Tuesday throughout the day and a bright sun in the afternoon melting away some of the accumulated snow.

Sports—

Of course if you are down south, why there are spring pre-season baseball games played in cold weather and also the horse racing. But most of us are not down south so we cannot participate in or read about local sports.

—o—

It has often occurred to me that some major team is missing a gold mine by not having a team on the West coast. Of course it is a long jump for teams to make and ecostly, but with the interest in baseball there, it seems that the attendance would more than compensate for the expense and time of traveling.

—o—

The American Bowling Congress meet in Detroit rolls merrily on as the more than 20,000 participants, individuals, pairs and five-man teams take part in this greatest kegling event in America. Teams come from all over America to take part in this amateur event. Marty Cassio, 35 year-old tailor of Elizabeth, N. J., hit high last week with 725 for top single record.

Edward J. Hickox, baseball coach at Springfiled Y. M. C. A. College home of basketball, was supposed to be through as a coach last year, but this year on a call from alumni and students he returned and his team won 16 of 18 games with the highest score in several seasons.

—o—

Wonder what a crewman thinks about as he sits on his little seat on rollers in the college shells? Right now, if he is thinking what I think he is, he is wondering when the winter is going to end so it will be warm rowing.

This continued winter is raising havoc with proposed spring baseball training. With most northern diamonds under several inches of snow, in spite of this being spring, baseball practice has been curtailed. And the cold weather has made it difficult for any sort of warm up exercises.

—o—

Professional football teams are providing funds for many of their players to return to colleges and resume their educations after the season closes. And in many cases students do graduate work and receive aid from the team funds.

Scout Leaders Take Training Course at Bath

Final plans have been completed for the fourteenth Annual University of Scouting, which is to be held in Bath at the Municipal Building on the five consecutive Monday nights starting on Monday, April 1. The training committee under the capable leadership of Dr. John G. Spencer, chairman, has worked hard and thoroughly to make the year's school the best possible from the standpoint of leadership and also, from the standpoint of material available for the various courses.

Ray M. Finch, scoutmaster of Troop 40, Dansvlle, will again be with us, directing the Scouters' thoughts along the line of "Elements of Scout Leadership" Part II. This course is offered to Scouters who are new in Scouting and is the basic course from which all Scouting lives and is advanced. Mr. Finch teaches from practical experience and his theories have been put into practice and are sound.

Gordon M. Ridenour, who will be the instructor in the "Principles of Scout Leadership", was formerly principal of Corning Free Academy, and is now principal of the Horseheads High School. He is a veteran member of our faculty. His course will deal with the administration and management of the troop. It also includes a good bit of child psychology. Mr. Ridenour really offers something which they may take back to their individual troops and apply to make for a better troop with greater efficiency and enthusiasm.

This year, the "University" offers the course "Health and Safety" which has as its theme "Health Through Knowledge, Safety Through Skill". The training committee has been fortunate in securing Dr. H. E. DeCamp of the Corning Glass Works as instructor for this course. Dr. DeCamp is one of the veteran scoutmasters and has for a good many years been putting into practice the topics which he will discuss in this course.

The indoor session of the Troop Camping Course will be held this year with John Bird, the "Dan Beard" of camping in the Steuben Area Council, as instructor. Mr. Bird not only knows how to put this material over to the Scouters but he has "practiced what he preached" and knows it to be sound material. The ground work will be laid down in this course and later in the year, the out-of-doors sessions will be held in the various districts for the benefit of the men.

The Troop Committeemen course will use as its text-book, the new Troop Committeemen's Pamphlet, with Dr. John G. Spencer as the instructor. This course is especially helpful to new committeemen, who know nothing about Scouting but who are willing to learn. There have been many lively debates in the years past and from all reports, this year will not go by without the same.

For the first time in the history of the Steuben Area Council, the "University of Scouting" will include in its curriculum, a Cubbing Course which will be headed by Leon Robbins, chairman of the Council Cubbing Committee. Mr. Robbins has spent considerable time in arranging this course and it will be most helpful to those who have already organized packs but need a little encouragement and support, and also to those interested in forming a Cub Pack in their community. Members of the Pack Organization Committee who will take part in this course are: Mr. Robbins, Jack Lagerbom, Gale Matson, Thomas Kelly, all from Painted Post. These men have been instrumental in organization of Packs in Painted Post, Hammondsport and Corning.

A supper will precede each of these meetings starting at 7 P. M. and classes will convene at 7:45 sharp. It is the hope of the committee that the course will be over by 9:30 P. M.

Congressman Cole Returns From Trip to Panama Canal Zone

Washington, D. C.—Congressman W. Sterling Cole of this district is expected to return from an investigation of the Panama Canal Zone today, March 28, to advise the Naval Affairs Committee, of which he is a member, on plans of the Navy Department to spend 18 million dollars in strengthening Canal defenses.

Congressman Cole was named by Chairman Vinson as member of a special seven-man sub-committee to make the investigation and advise the committee. Because of unsettled World conditions and the vital part which the Canal plays in the defense picture, Congress recently has laid much stress on the importance of this area.

As defense outpost for the canal in the Atlantic area the Navy and War Departments are planning to strongly fortify the U. S. Possession of Puerto Rico. They point out that planes from this Island will be able to scout far out to sea and give hours of advance warning of any threatened invasion.

An investigating sub-committee visited Puerto Rico last year and approved plans for making the Island a virtual Gibraltar. Now because of navy men's claim of its importance in the defense picture the Senate has proposed sending another committee to Puerto Rico this summer to investigate economic conditions on the Island, with a view toward improvement; and to study the insular legislature's request for Statehood.

The petition contended that Puerto Rico's 1,800,000 residents have become thoroughly Americanized since the Island was taken over following the War with Spain, and that it meets the other requirements for Statehood, Hawaii, the important outpost for defense of the Pacific approach to the Canal likewise is seeking to become a state. Hawaii already is one of the most strongly fortified areas in the world.

Snow News Is Good News

The teachers of Jasper Central School spent the Easter week-end at their various homes out of town. All but Louis Loughlin were able to return to Jasper to take up their duties Monday morning. Mr. Loughlin arrived Monday about 6 p. m. Heavy snow and winds made the roads nearly impassable.

Additional snow and wind Monday blocked traffic until the school busses had difficulty in making their trips. Carlton Potter, with fourteen pupils was stranded about one mile north of Jasper. The children were taken care of for the night by kindly neighbors.

Uncle Sam's Star Route carrier from Canisteo, usually arriving in Jasper about 5:45 P. M., arrived at 9:15 by leaving his car stranded in the snow banks a mile or more west of Jasper and walking in with the mail. He then returned to stay with his car, along with about twenty others in the same place. He arrived at his home about 1:30 Tuesday a. m. Clair Van Skiver the last of the line to reach Jasper arrived about 2:00 a. m.

Kenneth Schoonover, who works in Cameron Mills, really enjoys this kind of "slow motion" auto travelling. He spent one day, during the first week of this storm in February, in his car on Boyd's Bridge, with a snow plow also stranded in the snow. This time however, Kenneth's wife phoned him of the terrible storm here and condition of the roads, but Kenneth looking at the weather, in the Cameron Mills Valley, through the eyes of his "sunny" disposition, heeded not his wife's warning, therefore Kenneth spent the greater part of Monday night in his car in a snow bank a mile west of Jasper.

Offers Help in Planting Fruit

To meet the demands of growers who wish to set the plants in orchards or vineyards on the contour, or around the slope, the federal Soil Conservation Service, in cooperation with the Extension Service of the New York State College of Agriculture, offers help to the growers. Those interested in setting new plantings on the contour should consult the local county agricultural agent.

Compared to most New York farm enterprises, it is pointed out that fruit growing is on a long-time basis. If a mistake is made in planting a field of potatoes, it can be corrected the following year; if an orchard or a vineyard is improperly planted, however, it may take from fifteen to forty years to correct it.

By this time, says Warren C. Huff of the Soil Conservation Service, a clean-tilled orchard or vineyard may have lost the best of its soil.

If orchards or vineyards are planted on the contour lines, he says, plowing and tillage on the level leaves ridges to hold the water where it falls. If the rainfall is held, the soil will stay because water that runs off carries soil with it.

Water is also important in the growth of trees and vines and in fruit yields, he explans. Since most fruits contain from eighty to ninety per cent of water, fruit growers cannot afford to let much of it escape.

One Thousand Sign Up For 1940 Farm Program

One thousand Steuben county farmers, a third of the estimated enrollment for 1940, signed last week as cooperators in this year's Agricultural Conservation Program and placed orders for several thousand tons of limestone.

The enrollment of 3000 is estimated on the basis of a registration of 2760 in 1939 plus a ten percent gain in view of the grant of aid of lime and other new features.

Order Limestone

The lime grant incorporated in the program for the benefit of farmers who do not have the cash with which to purchase the lime, makes lime available at a cash cost of fifty cents a ton, the balance paid for by the Agricultural Conservation Program.

Steuben county farmers last fall ordered 25,000 tons of limestone under this new provision, and those in charge of the program estimate similar tonnage in the spring of 1940.

Other provisions of the program include payments for the use of clover and alfalfa, the application of superphosphate, and a new one grants the payment of thirty dollars for the reforestation of four acres of waste land, and potato growers who confine their acreage to the required allotment can receive cash payment of three cents a bushel for the normal production.

The sign-up is conducted daily at the following stations to which farmers should go previous to April 1. Headquarters for the towns of Hornby, Caton, Corning, Erwin and Lindley is Painted Post Village Hall. The farmers of Addison, Tuscarora, Rathbone and Woodhull sign at the Addison Town Rooms. Troupsburg and Jasper farmers register at Troupsburg Grange.

List Sign-up Stations

Greenwood, West Union, Hartsville and Canisteo farmers will enroll at Frank Turner's Greenwood home. Fremont Town Rooms are headquarters for the towns of Dansville, Fremont and Hornellsville. Farmers of Wayland and Cohocton, go to Atlanta Firemen's Hall; Avoca, Howard and Wheeler to the Avoca Town Rooms; Prattsburg and Pulteney to Prattsburg Town Rooms. Urbana, Wayne and Bradford farmers will enroll at H. M. DeGraw's home at Wayne and Bath, Campbell, Thurston and Cameron farmers register at the Bath Municipal Hall.
